

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON AT TACOMA

JOLINE PRATT,

Plaintiff,

v.

CAROLYN W. COLVIN, Acting
Commissioner of the Social Security Administration,

Defendant.

CASE NO. 14-cv-05651 JRC

ORDER ON PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT

This Court has jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636(c), Fed. R. Civ. P. 73 and Local Magistrate Judge Rule MJR 13 (see also Notice of Initial Assignment to a U.S. Magistrate Judge and Consent Form, Dkt. 5; Consent to Proceed Before a United States Magistrate Judge, Dkt. 6). This matter has been fully briefed (see Dkt. 16, 23, 24).

After considering and reviewing the record, the Court concludes that the ALJ failed to evaluate properly the medical evidence from an examining doctor. The ALJ's finding that plaintiff was capable of maintaining a moderate pace, as opposed to working

1 as a slow pace, is not supported by substantial evidence in the record as a whole and 2 contradicts multiple objective findings from Dr. Boltwood.

3 For this reason, this matter is reversed pursuant to sentence four of 42 U.S.C. § 4 405(g) and remanded to the Acting Commissioner for further consideration consistent 5 with this order.

6 BACKGROUND

7 Plaintiff, JOLINE PRATT, was born in 1983 and was 9 years old on the alleged 8 date of disability onset of January 1, 1993 (see AR. 176-81). Plaintiff did not complete 9 high school and has not tried to get a GED (AR. 46-47). She worked briefly at 10 McDonald's, but quit because she was too slow (AR. 47-48).

11 According to the ALJ, plaintiff has at least the severe impairments of "borderline 12 intellectual functioning (20 CFR 416.920(c))" (AR. 26).

13 At the time of the hearing, plaintiff was living with her mother (AR. 46).

14 PROCEDURAL HISTORY

15 Plaintiff's application for Supplemental Security Income ("SSI") benefits pursuant 16 to 42 U.S.C. § 1382(a) (Title XVI) of the Social Security Act was denied initially and 17 following reconsideration (see AR. 58-70, 72-85). Plaintiff's requested hearing was held 18 before Administrative Law Judge Stephanie Martz ("the ALJ") on September 11, 2012 19 (see AR. 38-57). On December 13, 2012, the ALJ issued a written decision in which the 20 ALJ concluded that plaintiff was not disabled pursuant to the Social Security Act (see 21 AR. 21-37).

1 In plaintiff's Opening Brief, plaintiff raises the following issues: (1) Whether or 2 not the ALJ erred in rejecting Dr. Boltwood's opinion that plaintiff would not be capable 3 of maintaining employment; (2) Whether or not the ALJ erred in affording significant 4 weight to Dr. Lewy and Dr. Clifford, the non-examining sources; (3) Whether or not the 5 ALJ assured the plaintiff's interests were considered at the hearing when plaintiff was 6 represented by her mother; and (4) Whether or not these errors were harmful and resulted 7 in a substantial likelihood of prejudice (see Dkt. 16, pp. 1-2).

8 STANDARD OF REVIEW

9 Pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 405(g), this Court may set aside the Commissioner's 10 denial of social security benefits if the ALJ's findings are based on legal error or not 11 supported by substantial evidence in the record as a whole. Bayliss v. Barnhart, 427 F.3d 12 1211, 1214 n.1 (9th Cir. 2005) (citing Tidwell v. Apfel, 161 F.3d 599, 601 (9th Cir.
 13 1999)).

14 DISCUSSION

15 (1) Whether or not the ALJ erred in rejecting Dr. Michael Boltwood's 16 opinion that plaintiff would not be capable of maintaining employment.

17 Plaintiff contends that the ALJ erred in the evaluation of the opinion of examining 18 doctor, Dr. Michael Boltwood, Ph.D., noting in part, that Dr. Boltwood "opined that 19 plaintiff would not be able to maintain gainful employment at a job that required even 20 'limited vocational skills such as a fast food restaurant'" (see Dkt. 16, p. 7). Defendant 21 contends that the ALJ's reasoning was valid and the findings with respect to the opinion 22 of Dr. Boltwood are supported by substantial evidence in the record.
 23
 24

1 When an opinion from an examining is contradicted by other medical opinions, 2 the examining doctor's opinion can be rejected "for specific and legitimate reasons that 3 are supported by substantial evidence in the record." Lester v. Chater, 81 F.3d 821, 830-4 31 (9th Cir. 1996) (citing Andrews v. Shalala, 53 F.3d 1035, 1043 (9th Cir. 1995); 5 Murray v. Heckler, 722 F.2d 499, 502 (9th Cir. 1983)).

6 Dr. Boltwood examined plaintiff on June 23, 2011 and reviewed records (see AR.
7 279-85). When reviewing plaintiff's history, he noted that she was in special education 8 classes throughout school, although she left school in the eighth grade because of teasing 9 and harassment from other students (see AR. 280). Although she was home schooled 10 after that point, Dr. Boltwood opined that because of "her mother's apparent intellectual 11 difficulties I suspect that the extent and quality of [plaintiff's] home schooling was quite 12 limited" (see id.). He previously had noted in his report that when testing plaintiff's 13 intelligence and encountering a question that plaintiff could not answer, he would ask 14 plaintiff's mother the same question and "she often would be unable to answer quite 15 simple questions," noting for example, that "she was unable to tell me how many months 16 there are in a year" (see AR. 79-80). Plaintiff has not received a high school diploma (see 17 AR. 280). Plaintiff reported working briefly at McDonald's restaurant for approximately 18 two months, but recalled that "she had a very difficult time learning tasks at work," and 19 found it difficult to cook hamburgers (see id.).
20

21 Dr. Boltwood performed Wechsler Adult Intelligence Scale – III (WAIS-III) 22 testing on plaintiff and noted that plaintiff "appeared to give her full effort throughout the 23 testing," and he opined that her testing data were a "valid representation of her current 24

1 cognitive abilities” (AR. 282). He noted that her “Full Scale IQ of 78 is typically 2 described as being in borderline range and places her at the 7th percentile for her age 3 group” (see id.). Dr. Boltwood concluded that the results of her WAIS-III subtests results 4 suggest that her greatest difficulties are “with verbal comprehension, processing speed 5 and working memory” (see id.). Consistent with this conclusion, plaintiff’s performance 6 on the Trails A test demonstrated that she was below the 10th percentile and although she 7 was able to complete the task, she worked slowly (see id.). Similarly, on the Trails B test 8 plaintiff’s performance again was below the 10th percentile, and again Dr. Boltwood 9 noted that she “worked quite slowly” (see id.). Dr. Boltwood noted that both of plaintiff’s 10 Trails A and B scores “are below typical cutoffs for indicating cognitive impairment” 11 (see id.).
12

13 Dr. Boltwood opined during plaintiff’s mental status examination (“MSE”) that 14 plaintiff “presented with a somewhat childlike manner consistent with her intellectual 15 limitations” (see AR. 281). He noted that plaintiff was cooperative and open throughout 16 the interview, and that there was “no evidence of malingering or purposefully 17 exaggerating her situation or symptoms” (see id.). Dr. Boltwood opined that plaintiff’s 18 fund of knowledge appeared limited and childlike, observing that she could not name the 19 U.S. vice president or the governor of Washington, and was unable to describe what was 20 east of Washington (see id.). He observed that when plaintiff was “asked what lay to the 21 west she initially responded, ‘Idaho,’ but when told that this was incorrect was unable to 22 provide any other answer” (see id.). Although plaintiff was able to complete serial seven 23

1 calculations, she counted on her fingers and calculated “the answers very slowly” (see 2 id.).

3 Plaintiff demonstrated difficulty with abstract thought, explaining the meaning of 4 the saying “the early bird gets the worm,” as “It’s probably saying that you should get up 5 early;” and explaining “people in glass houses shouldn’t throw stones” as “because it 6 would break” (see id.). Dr. Boltwood noted that when “asked if she could provide any 7 further interpretation, she repeatedly responded that she did not know what else the 8 saying might mean” (see id.). Plaintiff also demonstrated difficulty with questions testing 9 her insight and judgment, indicating that if she noticed smoke in a crowded theater, she 10 would “ask somebody else if they saw the smoke too” (see id.). When plaintiff was 11 “asked if there was any other way that she might respond or if there is anything else she 12 could think to do she replied, ‘Probably not’” (see id.).

14 Plaintiff reported having a driver’s license, but noted that she needed to take the 15 test six times (AR. 283). Although she indicated that she likes to shop for clothes, Dr.
16 Boltwood noted that it appeared “that when she goes shopping she almost always has her 17 mother with her” (see AR. 284). Although the WAIS-III Arithmetic Subtest indicates that 18 plaintiff could calculate change involving whole dollars, she “could not calculate 19 expected change when it involved both dollars and cents” (see id.).

20 Dr. Boltwood diagnosed plaintiff with Borderline Intellectual Functioning, and 21 noted that plaintiff suffered from lack of vocational training and support (see id.). In his 22 summary assessment, Dr. Boltwood indicated as follows:
23
24

1 Given [plaintiff's] "borderline" intellectual functioning and the difficulty 2 in having a clear understanding of her functional abilities based on her 3 current activities, valid assessment of her ability to maintain gainful 4 employment at this time is difficult and inevitably subjective. With these 5 caveats in mind, it is my assessment, based on my interview and testing, 6 that [plaintiff] is currently incapable of maintaining gainful employment.
7 This tentative conclusion is based on her limited intellectual abilities in 8 combination with her current naïve immaturity. In combination, I expect 9 that she would not currently be able to maintain gainful employment, 10 even in a job that requires limited vocational skills such as a fast food 11 restaurant.

12 (AR. 284-85).

13 The ALJ gave significant weight to the aspects of Dr. Boltwood's assessment that 14 supported a higher level of functioning but discounted all the aspects of his opinion that 15 supported a lesser level of functioning (see AR. 284). For example, the ALJ indicated 16 that Dr. Boltwood emphasized "that with some life skills, vocational training and support, 17 [plaintiff] could work" (see AR. 284-85). However, what Dr. Boltwood actually opined 18 was:

19 As noted above, it is very unfortunate that [plaintiff] did not receive the 20 type of life skills and vocational training that would have been available 21 to her if she had stayed in school. With this type of appropriate training, 22 supervision, and support, I believe that she has the potential to maintain 23 gainful employment. I also believe that, with appropriate life skills 24 training and ongoing support, she has the potential to live independently.
I would strongly recommend that she be referred to the appropriate state and community programs that would hopefully provide her with the vocational training, life skills training, job placement services, and job support that are appropriate and needed by an individual with her intellectual limitations.

(AR. 285).

A review of Dr. Boltwood's opinion reveals that he indicated that it was unfortunate that plaintiff did not receive skills and training that would have allowed her

1 to be able to work (see id.). It also is clear that he indicated that if she obtained training, 2 supervision, and support that she would have the potential to work in the future (see id.).
3 This is buttressed by his recommendation that she receive such training, services, and 4 support, as well as by his opinion that she needed receipt of such training, services and 5 support if she was to gain the ability to work in the future (see id.). Therefore, the 6 reliance by the ALJ on this aspect of Dr. Boltwood's opinion to support a finding that 7 plaintiff was able to work at the time he made his assessment is not supported by 8 substantial evidence in the record.

10 In addition, the ALJ gave "little weight" to Dr. Boltwood's opinion that plaintiff 11 was not able to maintain employment (see AR. 32). The ALJ supported this conclusion 12 by finding that "there is no objective evidence that she is unable to work entirely" (see 13 id.). However, this finding by the ALJ ignores much of the objective evidence from Dr.
14 Boltwood's testing, MSE and his interview results, discussed by the Court above.

15 The ALJ concluded that plaintiff's "performance on [MSE], her range of activities 16 and the doctor's high GAF rating," demonstrate that plaintiff is capable of performing 17 simple tasks at a moderate pace (see id.). As the Court has discussed, however, plaintiff's 18 performance on the MSE demonstrates through multiple objective tests that plaintiff 19 "worked quite slowly" (see, e.g., AR. 282).
20

21 Dr. Boltwood concluded that the results of her WAIS-III subtests suggest that her 22 greatest difficulties include problems with "processing speed" (AR. 282). Similarly, 23 plaintiff's performance on Trails A demonstrated that she was below the 10th percentile 24 and she worked slowly (see id.). Similarly, on the Trails B test plaintiff's performance

1 again was below the 10th percentile, and again Dr. Boltwood noted that she “worked quite 2 slowly” (see id.). In addition, during the MSE, plaintiff was able to complete serial seven 3 calculations, but only by counting on her fingers and by calculating “the answers very 4 slowly” (see AR. 281). During the MSE, plaintiff also demonstrated difficulty with 5 questions testing her fund of knowledge, her ability for abstract thought, and her insight 6 and judgment (see id.). Therefore, the Court concludes that the ALJ’s finding that 7 plaintiff’s MSE demonstrates that plaintiff was capable of working at a moderate pace is 8 not supported by substantial evidence in the record as a whole (see AR. 32). To the 9 contrary, plaintiff’s MSE demonstrates that plaintiff only was capable of completing 10 simple tasks “very slowly” (see AR. 281).
11

12 Similarly, plaintiff’s GAF score is an overall assessment encompassing many 13 aspects of functioning, and the “Social Security Administration has not endorsed the 14 GAF scale for use in the Social Security and SSI disability programs, and has indicated 15 that GAF scores have no ‘direct correlation to the severity requirements in the mental 16 disorders listings.’” See De Los Reyes v. Comm’r of Soc. Sec. Admin., No. 12-CV-02048-17 AC, 2014 WL 61320 at *13, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 182768 at *37 (D. Oregon 18 December 5, 2103) (citing Revised Medical Criteria for Evaluating Mental Disorders and 19 Traumatic Brain Injury, 65 Fed. Reg. § 50746-01 (Aug. 21, 2000); Thomas v. Astrue, CV 20 07-8040-PLA, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5104, 2009 WL 151488 at *6 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 21, 21 2009)). Plaintiff’s GAF score does not demonstrate that plaintiff is capable of working at 22 a moderate pace.
23
24

1 Finally, although the ALJ concludes that plaintiff's "range of activities" 2 demonstrates that plaintiff is capable of working at a moderate pace, the ALJ does not 3 specify a single activity that demonstrates that plaintiff is capable of working at a 4 moderate pace as opposed to the very slow pace demonstrated by her MSE and WAIS-III
5 tests. Plaintiff's activities included "attending to self-care, preparing meals, household 6 chores, using the computer, grocery shopping and running errands with her mother," as 7 well as "ice-skating, swimming, watching movies, and taking walks on the beach" (see 8 AR. 31). The ALJ does not cite any evidence in the record demonstrating that any of 9 these activities was performed at a moderate pace as opposed to at a slow pace.
10

11 For the reasons stated, and based on the record as a whole, the Court concludes 12 that the ALJ's finding that plaintiff's performance on MSE, her range of activities, and 13 plaintiff's GAF rating demonstrate that plaintiff is capable of working at a moderate pace 14 is not supported by substantial evidence in the record as a whole (see AR. 32). The ALJ 15 did not explain why her assessment more correct than the psychologist who performed 16 extensive testing of plaintiff. However, when an ALJ seeks to discredit a medical 17 opinion, she must explain why her own interpretations, rather than those of the doctors, 18 are correct. Reddick v. Chater, 157 F.3d 715, 725 (9th Cir. 1998) (citing Embrey v.
19 Bowen, 849 F.2d 418, 421-22 (9th Cir. 1988)); see also Blankenship v. Bowen, 874 F.2d 20 1116, 1121 (6th Cir. 1989) ("When mental illness is the basis of a disability claim, 21 clinical and laboratory data may consist of the diagnosis and observations of professional 22 trained in the field of psychopathology. The report of a psychiatrist should not be rejected 23 simply because of the relative imprecision of the psychiatric methodology or the absence 24

1 of substantial documentation”) (quoting Poulin v. Bowen, 817 F.2d 865, 873-74 (D.C.
 2 Cir. 1987) (quoting Lebus v. Harris, 526 F.Supp. 56, 60 (N.D. Cal. 1981))); Schmidt v.
 3 Sullivan, 914 F.2d 117, 118 (7th Cir. 1990) (“judges, including administrative law judges
 4 of the Social Security Administration, must be careful not to succumb to the temptation 5 to play doctor. The medical expertise of the Social Security Administration is reflected in 6 regulations; it is not the birthright of the lawyers who apply them. Common sense can 7 mislead; lay intuitions about medical phenomena are often wrong”) (internal citations 8 omitted)).

 10 Dr. Boltwood conducted extensive testing of plaintiff, and many of plaintiff’s test 11 results reveal that plaintiff is capable of performing simple tasks only at a very slow pace.
 12 The ALJ’s rejection of Dr. Boltwood’s opinion that plaintiff is incapable of maintaining 13 gainful employment, and that “she would not currently be able to maintain gainful 14 employment, even in a job that requires limited vocational skills such as a fast food 15 restaurant,” is not supported by substantial evidence in the record as a whole (see AR.
 16 284-85). The ALJ’s contrary finding that plaintiff is capable of performing work at a 17 moderate pace contradicts the objective testing results of Dr. Boltwood.

18 The Court also concludes that this error is not harmless.

19 The Ninth Circuit has “recognized that harmless error principles apply in the 20 Social Security Act context.” Molina v. Astrue, 674 F.3d 1104, 1115 (9th Cir. 2012) 21 (citing Stout v. Commissioner, Social Security Administration, 454 F.3d 1050, 1054 (9th 22 Cir. 2006) (collecting cases)). The Ninth Circuit noted that “in each case we look at the 23 record as a whole to determine [if] the error alters the outcome of the case.” Id. The court 24

1 also noted that the Ninth Circuit has “adhered to the general principle that an ALJ’s error 2 is harmless where it is ‘inconsequential to the ultimate nondisability determination.’” Id.
3 (quoting Carmickle v. Comm’r Soc. Sec. Admin., 533 F.3d 1155, 1162 (9th Cir. 2008))
4 (other citations omitted). Courts must review cases “‘without regard to errors’ that do not 5 affect the parties’ ‘substantial rights.’” Id. at 1118 (quoting Shinsheki v. Sanders, 556
6 U.S. 396, 407 (2009) (quoting 28 U.S.C. § 2111) (codification of the harmless error 7 rule)).

9 Here, in contrast with the objective testing results of Dr. Boltwood, the ALJ found 10 that plaintiff had the residual functional capacity (“RFC”) to perform “work at a 11 moderate pace” (see AR. 29, 32). The ALJ utilized this RFC when presenting a 12 hypothetical to the vocational expert (“VE”) and when making her step five finding in 13 reliance on the VE’s testimony that plaintiff could perform work in the national economy 14 (see AR. 33-34, 56). The ALJ’s ultimate conclusion that plaintiff was not disabled was 15 based on the VE’s testimony, which was based on this RFC (see id.). Furthermore, 16 tellingly, the VE testified that if a hypothetical individual with plaintiff’s RFC “was 17 slower in speed and ended up being approximately twenty percent slower than the 18 average worker,” such individual would be “an hour and a half less competitive than their 19 co-workers and I don’t believe that employers would tolerate that, at least for very long at 20 any job” (AR. 56-57). Therefore, had the ALJ included in plaintiff’s RFC that she only 21 was capable of performing work at a slow pace, it is likely that she would have been 22 required to find plaintiff disabled (see id.).
23
24

1 Based on this reason and the relevant record, the Court ORDERS that this matter 2 be REVERSED and REMANDED pursuant to sentence four of 42 U.S.C. § 405(g) to 3 the Acting Commissioner for further consideration consistent with this order.

4 JUDGMENT should be for plaintiff and the case should be closed.
